

Security Policy and Procedure Development

A comprehensive information security policy and supporting procedures are crucial components of an information security management system. They are also key requirements for organisations seeking compliance with industry standards such as ISO 27001/BS 7799.

Understanding the Issue

The type of information security policies and procedures you implement must reflect how you work and your organisational needs.

A sound corporate wide security policy along with supporting procedures are crucial components of any information security management system. They are also key requirements for organisations targeting compliance with industry standards such as ISO 27001/BS 7799.

The type of security policies and procedures you implement must reflect how you work and your organisational needs.

Implementing a defined security policy has immense benefits to individuals and organisations alike including:

- Clarity in the importance of information security.
- Defined responsibilities.
- Promoted education, awareness and consistency.
- Satisfaction of legal and internal obligations.
- Protected assets from loss, confidentiality breaches, integrity and unavailability.
- Minimised damage to reputation in the event of a security incident.
