Securing your Organisation

A key activity for any organisation seeking compliance or certification against ISO 27001 is the completion of a gap analysis. Conducting a gap analysis provides auditable proof of the organisation's willingness, preparedness and ability to comply with the requirements laid down within the organisation's information security policies. Such a report can also act a base-line from which to move forward and improve the organisation's security posture.

Understanding the Issue

The ISO 27000 series recommend best practice for information security management.

The adoption of ISO 27001 can bring many benefits including:

- Competitive edge – By demonstrating your internal processes comply with industry-recognised best practices.
- Meet customers' requirements – Many clients demand achievement of ISO 27001 before they will work with you.
- Facilitating business partnerships – Satisfying potential business partners that you will protect their information whilst this is under your control.
- Meeting legal requirements – Compliance with ISO 27001 helps the organisation meet its legal responsibilities involving data protection and the privacy of personal information as well as the protection of auditable records and intellectual property rights.

ISO 27001 is the formal standard against which organisations can seek internationally recognised and mutually acceptable information security certification. A major part of achieving ISO 27001 certification involves comparing the organisation's documented security policy with the organisation's actual existing security posture.
